

Rapid Feedback Aims and Objectives

The Rapid Feedback system is aimed to give weekly feedback on how students are performing on the theoretical courses in the third and fourth year. Students may hand in written attempts at Rapid Feedback problems on the problem sheet for each course. These will be marked by a PG demonstrator and returned a few days later. Separately from this, there will also be a class, run by the PG, who will go over the problems and address any other question students may have about the course. Lecturers are not involved. Rapid Feedback is not compulsory and does not involve continuous assessment. More detailed instructions will be provided by each lecturer.
